INTERPRETING NEWS OF WORLD EVENTS 1933–1938

OVERVIEW

By examining news coverage around three key events related to the early warning signs of the Holocaust, students will learn that information about the Nazi persecution of European Jews was available to the public. They will also consider the question of what other issues or events were competing for Americans' attention and concern at the same time. Despite the many issues that were on their minds during the period 1933–1938, some Americans took actions to help persecuted Jews abroad, with varying degrees of effectiveness.

This lesson explores the following questions:

- How did Americans learn about the Nazi persecution of Jews in Europe in the context of other international, national, and local news stories? How did they make sense of these events?

HISTORY KEY QUESTIONS EXPLORED

1. What information about the Nazi persecution of Jews was being reported in the news media throughout the United States?
2. What else was being covered in the news and competing for the public's attention during this period?
3. How did Americans respond to this knowledge? What impact did these actions have?
4. How might competing issues have influenced the willingness of the American public to respond to the early persecution of Jews in Europe?

HISTORY LEARNING OBJECTIVES

1. Students will learn that information about the persecution of European Jews was available in newspapers throughout the United States.
2. Students will understand that competing concerns influenced the willingness of the American people to respond to this persecution.
3. Some Americans took actions in an effort to help persecuted Jews abroad, with varying degrees of effectiveness.

ELA/MEDIA LITERACY KEY QUESTIONS EXPLORED

1. What influences the interpretation of events in newspapers?
2. How do topics in the news become meaningful to readers?
3. How is the significance of events communicated to the public?
4. How do individual readers decide which news stories are more important than others?

Time

1–2 class periods

PROCEDURE

Introduction/Context

- Teachers may wish to read the Museum’s Holocaust Encyclopedia article, The United States and the Nazi Threat: 1933–37 as preparation for this lesson.
- Ask students to recall events and trends occurring during the years surrounding 1933. Possible answers include: the Great Depression, prohibition, isolationism, aftermath of World War I, fears of communism, anti-immigrant sentiment, racism.
- If needed, review the introductory slides, which set the context for that period in the United States and in Germany.
- Ask students, “What do you think Americans knew about what was happening in Nazi Germany at this time?”

Reading and Analyzing Historical Newspapers

- Using the sample newspaper, demonstrate to the class how to analyze the newspaper, identify the article relevant to the events of the Holocaust, and answer the questions in the worksheet.
- Split the class into groups of 2–3 students.
- Distribute one newspaper front page and the lesson worksheet to each group.
- Students survey and analyze their group’s newspaper and complete the worksheet. Students discuss the differences in their interpretations of the newspaper and work them out to draw conclusions as a group.
- Students are asked to answer the following questions:
  - Which of the news stories covered that day would a reader be most concerned about? Why?
  - What does the article on this front page reveal about the information Americans had about the persecution of Jews in Nazi Germany?
  - In light of all of the issues of the day and what you know about this time period, how might readers have reacted to this story?

Presentation and Discussion

- In chronological order by event (boycott/Nuremberg Laws/Olympics), ask groups to present their newspaper front page and their analysis to the class.
Possible discussion questions:
  - Do you agree or disagree with this group’s conclusions? Why/why not?
  - What are the similarities and differences in how the events of the Holocaust were covered in the newspapers? How might the similarities and differences have impacted the reader’s concern about these events?
- As the presentations on each event conclude, ask the class to consider the provided case studies that show how some Americans responded to that event. You can select 1–2 examples from the collection of materials provided to best suit your class.
Possible discussion questions:
  - Why do you think these people decided to take this action?
  - Do you think these actions had an impact? Why or why not?
- Follow this process for each event, alternating presentations of the newspaper with examples of actual responses to that event.

OPTIONAL EXTENSION

Connecting the Past to the Present

Look at the front page of a recent newspaper. What article are you most drawn to and why? What topics do you follow most closely? Which do you neglect? How does looking at historical examples shed light on the challenges we might face in motivating the public to respond to threats to people abroad today?

About the Nazis' Boycott of Jewish Businesses

SUMMARY

In the first nationwide, planned action against Jews, Nazis boycotted Jewish businesses and professionals throughout Germany.

In March 1933, the SA (Storm Troopers) attacked Jewish-owned department stores in German cities in an attempt to segregate Jews from the rest of society. Local police, not yet under Nazi control, unsuccessfully attempted to stop the attacks. Members of the SA continued the rampage and entered courtrooms, dragging Jewish lawyers and judges into the streets where they are subjected to humiliating public acts. International Jewish organizations and the press, which urged a boycott of German goods, publicized these attacks. In response, the Nazis organized the April 1, 1933, nationwide boycott of Jewish businesses in Germany, blaming Jews for the anti-German tone of the international press.

On the day of the boycott, Storm Troopers (Sturmabteilung; SA) stood menacingly in front of Jewish-owned department stores and retail establishments, and the offices of professionals such as doctors and lawyers. The Star of David was painted in yellow and black across thousands of doors and windows, with accompanying antisemitic slogans. Signs were posted saying, "Don't Buy from Jews" and "The Jews Are Our Misfortune." In some towns, the SA marched through streets singing anti-Jewish slogans and party songs. Throughout Germany, acts of violence against individual Jews and Jewish property occurred; the police intervened only rarely.

The official boycott began at 10 a.m. and ended at midnight. Although the national boycott operation, organized by local Nazi party chiefs, lasted only one day and was ignored by many individual Germans who continued to shop in Jewish-owned stores, it marked the beginning of a nationwide campaign by the Nazi party against the entire German Jewish population. A week later, on April 7, 1933, the German government enacted the Law for the Restoration of the Professional Civil Service, which restricted employment in the civil service to Aryans. Jewish government workers, including teachers in public schools and universities, were fired. Similar laws were passed in the following weeks affecting Jewish lawyers and doctors.

About the Announcement of the Nuremberg Race Laws

SUMMARY

At their annual party rally, Nazi leaders announced new laws that defined Jews as a “race” and stripped them of basic citizenship rights.

The German government decreed the Nuremberg Race Laws (Reich Citizenship Law and Law for the Protection of German Blood and German Honor) on September 15, 1935. The laws were passed during a special session of the Nazi-controlled Reichstag at the party’s rally in Nuremberg, Germany.

These laws institutionalized many of the racial theories underpinning Nazi ideology and provided the legal framework for the systematic persecution of Jews in Germany. The laws excluded Jews from Reich citizenship and prohibited them from marrying or having sexual relations with persons of “German or German-related blood.” Ordinances supporting these laws deprived German Jews of their right to participate in the political process, including by voting or running for public office.

These laws represented a major shift from traditional antisemitism, which defined Jews by religious belief, to a conception of Jews as members of a race, defined by blood and by lineage. For this reason, the Nuremberg Race Laws did not identify a “Jew” as someone with particular religious convictions, but instead as someone with three or four Jewish grandparents. Many Germans who had not practiced Judaism or who had not done so for years found themselves caught in the grip of Nazi terror. Even people with Jewish grandparents who had converted to Christianity could be defined as Jews.

On November 14, 1935, the first supplemental decree of the Nuremberg Laws extended the prohibition to marriage or sexual relations between people who could produce “racially suspect” offspring. A week later, the Minister of the Interior interpreted this to mean relations between “those of German or related blood” and Roma (Gypsies), blacks, or their offspring.

The News Safe Driving Campaign

Assisted by the reports of his dead and scores of others injured in automobile accidents in Indiana over the week-end, readers of The News today pledged their whole-hearted co-operation to the safe driving campaign begun by this newspaper Saturday.

A personal pledge to assure their share of the public responsibility to drive safely on Indiana highways has been signed by readers of this newspaper.

The proposal was with a hearty response in all departments of The News. Reacting to the tragic news of the appalling death toll, the News employees were eager to join in the movement. The final pledges were signed by the editorial, advertising, circulation and mechanical departments and there is very evidence that they will be 100 per cent co-operation among the entire news organization.

The first pledge received from outside The News organization was that of G. W. Wagoner, 1216 Broadway avenue, a salesman for the Tarkenton and Central Sales Company. Mr. Wagoner was in the business office of The News when the printed pledge first appeared and he attached his signature immediately, promising "unreservedly and unconditionally."

Irresponsible a number of business organizations have also responded by promising the united support of their employees in the great transportation movement. Among the first asking for copies of the pledge were the Moore Store, the Kinross Ice Cream Company and the Red Oak Company.

The safe driving pledge, which can be found on and mailed in The News, is printed today on Page 1, Part 2.

About the Debate to Send the US Team to the Berlin Olympics

After months of public debate about whether the United States should send a team to the “Nazi Olympics,” the Amateur Athletic Union narrowly voted against a boycott of the games.

SUMMARY

In 1931, the International Olympic Committee awarded the 1936 Summer Olympics to Berlin. Soon after Hitler took power in 1933, observers in the United States and other western democracies questioned the morality of supporting Olympic Games hosted by the Nazi regime.

Responding to reports of the persecution of Jewish athletes in 1933, Avery Brundage, president of the American Olympic Committee (AOC), like many others in the Olympic movement, initially considered moving the games from Germany. However, after a brief and tightly managed inspection of German sports facilities in 1934, Brundage stated publicly that Jewish athletes were being treated fairly and that the games should go on as planned.

Judge Jeremiah Mahoney, president of the Amateur Athletic Union (AAU), led efforts to boycott the 1936 Olympics, pointing out that Germany had broken Olympic rules forbidding discrimination based on race and religion. New York Mayor Fiorello La Guardia, New York Governor Al Smith, and Massachusetts Governor James Curley also opposed sending a team to Berlin. The Catholic journal the Commonweal (November 8, 1935) advised boycotting an Olympics that would set the seal of approval on radically anti-Christian Nazi doctrines.

However, a Brundage maneuvered the AAU to a close vote in favor of sending an American team to Berlin, and once the AAU of the United States voted for participation in December 1935, other countries fell in line and the wider boycott movement failed.

On August 1, 1936, Hitler opened the XIth Olympiad. The games were a propaganda success for the Nazi government. Adolf Hitler's Nazi dictatorship camouflaged its racist, militaristic character and exploited the games to bedazzle many foreign spectators and journalists with an image of a peaceful, tolerant Germany. As post-Olympics reports were filed, Hitler pressed on with grandiose plans for German expansion. Nazi persecution of Jews resumed.
